Center for Bioethics and Biolaw (CBB) was established in 2015 at the Faculty of Philosophy, University of Warsaw. It brings together both experienced and young scholars working on ethical, as well as legal, cultural, and social aspects of progress in medical and biological sciences. CBB researchers are involved in numerous interdisciplinary national and international research projects like the HERA-funded project “Healthcare as a public space: social integration and social diversity in the context of access to healthcare in Europe”. Apart from research activities, the CBB undertakes various activities aimed at developing Polish bioethics as social practice and public discourse. It collaborates closely with the one and only MA Program in Bioethics in Poland, offered by the Faculty of Philosophy, University of Warsaw (see here) as well as with the Bioethics Committee of the Polish Academy of Sciences.
